

NEVER FORGET

Dear Veteran,

We read a book called, "A Poppy is to Remember," which showed how scary it must be to fight in war. We saw graves of soldiers, guns, and tanks. What a terrible thing to go through. I felt sorry for the soldiers who lost their lives fighting for us.

We sang a song called, "What a Wonderful World," for Remembrance Day and we heard a song called, "It's a Pittance of Time." John McCrae wrote a poem called, "In Flanders Fields," he wrote the poem because his friend died.

On November 11th 1918 people everywhere celebrated the return of peace after World War One. I am grateful that my dad isn't a soldier or else I would be sad for the rest of my life if he was killed.

I would like to thank the soldiers for keeping our country safe.

Yours Truly,

Peter
